On June 25, 2016, the EPA and the Department of Energy announced that a $53 million grant program will be distributed to 18 renewable energy projects across the nation. The grant program will award $29 million in grants and $24 million in loan guarantees to develop or expand clean energy projects. In all, the grants are valued at over $1.7 billion. While the grants are awarded at the discretion of the grantees, the projects must meet two key objectives, the Department of Energy says: First, the projects must be sited in a designated National Energy Resource region, which is also referred to as a Clean Energy Corridor. Second, the projects must be located in an area that has been designated as having high-priority energy needs, such as Hawaii, Alaska and Puerto Rico. Hawaii received $25 million in grant funding for three projects. The awardees include (1) a wind farm on the island of Molokai, which will generate up to 79 MW of electricity and is projected to cost $111.6 million; (2) a 30 MW biomass facility in Waimea that will use timber from new and existing plantations in the island's pine forests, and (3) 2d92ce491b
