The content of individual types of mast cells in the mammary glands was investigated in mice, 1, 7, 14 and 21 days after delivery of the first litter. The number of mast cells increases as pregnancy proceeds, but the percentage of all the cells remains unchanged. Degranulated mast cells occupy about 33% of the whole population on the 7th day of gestation and comprise 64% of the mast cell population on the 14th day of gestation. The percentage of degranulated mast
