Kannada stories online. A few days after his visit, Jadu and Raju returned to their village. The three friends spent most of their time reading books they had brought with them. When Hari Varma asked them what had happened to them, Jadu and Raju insisted that they were doing well. Every Saturday, however, Hari Varma took the three of them for a meal in Bombay and then bought them some new books. Meanwhile, Hari Varma had already informed his wife about the existence of his three friends, both sons of rich cotton mill owners. Once a week, he invited them for a meal and asked them about their studies. On one such visit, Raju explained to him that he was doing only a part of his studies and that he was planning to write an autobiography. Hari Varma advised Raju to write an autobiography as this would be quite a good way to make money and have a career. Raju and Jadu immediately wrote an application and started getting ready for the school examinations. One morning in the exam hall, Raju found his friend Jadu in trouble. He was caught by the exam invigilator in an act of cheating. He was explaining to the invigilator that he was only a poor farmer's son who was taking the examinations for the first time. He was willing to lose his place if the invigilator would cancel the examination and let him get back to his village. The invigilator promised Raju to do whatever he wanted. So, Raju asked him to cancel the examination. However, his friend Jadu refused to do it. Just then, the inspector in charge came to know about the incident. He called Raju and Jadu into his office and asked them why they had cancelled the examination. Jadu replied, "Maharaj, I don't want to lose my seat." Hari Varma was very angry with Jadu and immediately wrote a letter to the exam invigilator and demanded an explanation. The invigilator came back with a reply. He told Hari Varma that Raju and Jadu were taking the examinations on behalf of their friend Rama, who was not present in the exam hall. Hari Varma read the exam invigilator's statement and immediately sent a letter to the principal of the school. The principal was only too happy to let the matter end in that way. Kannada
